

Gender and e-Learning

DI Barbara Buchegger, team consult wien

Gender Mainstreaming

is aimed at incorporating a gender sensitive perspective in all activities and measures undertaken. This implies that the differing circumstances and needs of women and men are taken into account and that all measures undertaken are examined in accordance to its gender specific effects and implications. All measures are devised in such a way that they promote equal opportunities. (www.gem.or.at)

- GM is not only supporting women....
- Strategy on political level

Making differences visible...

Making differences visible...

- Different approaches
- Different strengthes
- Different support

Differences

Differences

- Usage of computer and internet
- Language knowledge
- Learning strategies

Activate different learning types

eLearning as community learning

Girls: Less interested

Boys: Using playing instinct

Click and learn

Girls: Intersted in communication

Boys:
more sceptical,
Less interested in communication

Gender and computer usage

